

democracy is held in letter and as the worst form of autocracy that one can ever imagine. Pakistan's democracy is all young. There are all traces pertaining to any interventions which led the evolution of democracy in the country. It is also argued that democracy is a self-correcting system provided if it is given space and time. However in Pakistan, prevalence of dynastic politics, apartheid of economic resources, dearth of provision of democratic rights, apathy of minorities, impulsive judiciary, leaks in public revenues, socio-economic degradation so on and so forth, have been the common phenomena. Under such a situation, the sense of patriotism significantly declined. On the other side, Pakistan is struggling from the colossal allocation of budget to defense and debt servicing. Under lack of implementation of direct taxation to cope with the indispensable allocations necessary for socio-economic amelioration, the country has been rigorously trying to maintain sufficient capacity to deal with internal and external challenges. Furthermore, due to insufficient budgetary allocation to education, the children of our down-trodden society are compelled to get enrolled into seminaries where modern education is not taught comprehensively. This gives birth to the closed mind-set and orthodoxy which has become a cause of religious bigotry and extremist insight against others. Reportedly, there are around 2.5 million children are out-of-school. The clergy class is reportedly found radical and opposed to the concept of nation-state akin to that of proscribed militant outfits. They are badly misled by their misinterpretation of the religious injunctions which has led Pakistan to the state of quandary of identity crisis. Hence, the dilemma of identity crisis remains outstanding varying between the identity of Muslim or Pakistani either. In addition, the rise and spread of the western propaganda of Islamophobia has also created an identity crisis in the Muslim world. Usually, Muslims are being recognised by the religion Islam despite the fact that they have dissolved into the western society with the possession of nationality. Moreover, the denial of human rights to Muslims by France and Germany by prohibiting the use of the Burkinis and obligating the hand-shake for Muslim women shows that their democracy is losing its strength and has fallen prone to defects and deficiencies. Similarly, identity crisis is the creation of religious insinuations, western-infested Islamophobia and self-imposed perception. This is not a debate as long as democratic legalities are implemented in letter and spirit, Pakistan is certainly a religious state where minorities need to respect the religious culture and norms of Muslims, but Muslims should also respect the minority's religious culture in reciprocity. Last but not least, the role of military has become tangibly professional. The successful transitions of civilian regime uninterrupted are the harbinger of thriving democracy. Nothing can be mended by itself altogether.

SPSC-passed affectees continue protest

KARACHI: The candidates, who passed the Sindh Public Service Commission (SPSC) examination and got jobs, continued their protest demonstration outside the Karachi Press Club on Monday, requesting the government to help them save their jobs. It may be noted that the Supreme Court of Pakistan has annulled SPSC's test and interviews held in 2013 and ordered fresh examination. After the issuance of the offer letters, some successful candidates out of 227 resigned from their previous jobs to be the part of the Sindh government. A protester, Tariq Ahmed, speaking on the occasion said that yesterday (Sunday) Transport and Mass Transit Minister Syed Nasir Hussain Shah assured them that he will help provide them a lawyer. The protesters appealed to the Chief Justice of Pakistan to constitute a larger bench and review its verdict for sake of livelihood of their children. -Our Reporter
