the nuclear tests were released and confirmed dozens of islands were exposed to the fallout

Evank called it the "ultimate new information" that had not been revealed to Marshall Islands negotiators. "It is abundantly clear that the agreement was not negotiated in good faith and does not provide a fair and just settlement of the damages caused," he said. US ambassador Thomas Ambrose, who delivered prepared remarks in both English and Marshallese languages, said "words are insufficient to express the sadness" of the 60th anniversary of the nuclear test.
