Alcatel-Lucent to create the world's biggest supplier of mobile phone network equipment, both firms said Wednesday.

The merger of two companies that were once new technology stars but have since lost some of their lustre will produce a European champion able to take on Nokia's Swedish rival Ericsson or fierce Chinese competition.

The announcement sent shares in Alcatel-Lucent plunging 15 percent on Paris's stock market, while Nokia's stocks were down 1.20 percent to 7.40 euros on the Helsinki market.

Finland's Nokia said it had agreed to give shareholders in its Franco-American rival 0.55 shares in the new merged company for every one of their own. "This transaction comes at the right time to strengthen the European technology industry," said Alcatel-Lucent boss Michel Combes.

"The global scale and footprint of the new company will reinforce its presence in the United States and China," he added.

The two firms have "highly complementary portfolios and geographies, with particular strength in the United States, China, Europe and Asia-Pacific," Nokia's statement said.—AFP

Barkhauser hinted that the Swiss would appreciate more regular visits. "Relations between neighbours require care. It is normal to have problems with your neighbour, but you have to talk about them, openly and often," he told public broadcaster RTS.

France and Switzerland share a 570-kilometre (350-mile) border.

Hollande, who is accompanied by five ministers, was due to hold a press conference later Wednesday with Swiss President Simonetta Sommaruga.

A state dinner is to follow. During his visit, he will meet with some of the 167,000 French nationals who live in Switzerland, and will also discuss the situation of the some 150,000 residents of France who commute across the border each day to work.

Many have seen their jobs threatened by the sudden surge in the value of the Swiss franc, which has hurt Swiss export businesses particularly.

Cross-border workers were also alarmed by a popular vote last year calling for Switzerland to strictly control immigration of EU citizens.

Hollande is expected to remind Bern of its longstanding agreement to give EU country nationals free access to its labour market.

On Thursday, he and Sommaruga are set to travel to Switzerland's financial capital Zurich before taking a special train to Lausanne.

They will conduct a series of visits focused among other things on Swiss innovation in the area of environmentally sustainable economic growth and clean technology, the French presidency said.—AFP

subsidies with targeted subsidies

• Increasing efficiency of fiscal instruments for workers welfare (e.g. Workers Welfare Fund)

• Removal of any duplications between federal and provincial social safety net programmes

• Minimum rural employment guarantee scheme in pilot districts

• Enhanced allocations for skills training to facilitate mobility

• Ensuring compliance of minimum wage laws and workplace safety standards

• Increase allocations for productivity or exports. It is recommended that exemption from GST for selected agriculture inputs may be allowed to ensure food security and rural development.

• In order to restore the confidence of business community (or tax authorities), a deadline of two months should be placed on clearance of sales tax refunds. For new businesses, sales tax registration is still a lengthy process and can take up to several months.

• The provision of self-assessment and voluntary compliance under the Sales Tax Act 1990 compromises revenue as it is not supported by extensive or randomised audit. Third party oversight can also help improving audit function at tax authorities.

• Federal excise duty (FED) on locally produced cigarette
