Yoga, meditation may reduce dementia risk

ISLAMABAD, May 12: Completing a 3-month yoga and meditation course may reduce older adults' risk of mild cognitive impairment - considered a precursor for development of Alzheimer's disease and other forms of dementia. This is the conclusion of a new study published in the Journal of Alzheimer's Disease.

Yoga and meditation were found to improve verbal and visual-spatial memory for older adults. The study was led by researchers from the University of California-Los Angeles (UCLA), including senior author Dr. Helen Lavretsky, of the Department of Psychiatry.

Mild cognitive impairment (MCI) is characterized by noticeable changes in cognitive function, such as the development of memory and thinking problems.

Though these changes are not severe enough to interfere with a person's independent and day-to-day activities, symptoms can worsen over time, increasing the risk of Alzheimer's disease and other dementias. According to long-term studies indicate around 10-20 percent of adults aged 65 and older likely to have MCI. Of those adults, it is estimated that around 6-15 percent develop dementia each year.
