PURCHASE OF MEDICAL EQUIPMENT

Decision on which instrument to purchase is taken after considering its quality, utility and safety of patients and personnel.

Those instruments which have good local and international reputation and dependability are considered.

Also to be taken into consideration is reputation of the vendor whether he can provide dependable after sales service.

While purchasing equipment for Government hospitals consideration has to be given to the fact that multiple users handle the instruments and a large number of patients have to be examined/operated. Thus any instrument should be sturdy, dependable and the vendor should be able to provide service.

Equipment whose technology is outdated or the instrument does not enjoy good reputation nationally or internationally is not considered.

Vendors whose after sales service is dependable are preferred.

NIT No. NP-PCB/18/302-T

Item No. 2 YAG Laser

- Quality products are generally made in EU, USA, Japan and frequently government tenders for medical equipments are restricted to these countries to ensure quality and reliability. If bidding was allowed to everyone then a lot of low quality/low reliability equipment may be tendered.
- The equipment offered by Ophthalmotec is not known locally/ Internationally and was therefore not accepted.
