warned their seniors about the condition of the transformers and it was their duty to resolve the issue.

"Now, another transformer overheats sometimes, due to which we must disconnect the power supply to at least four feeders," he said, adding that the faulty transformer was sent for reclamation after almost eight months on March 15. According to the official, the senior officials were not giving much attention to the issue, which is why the transformer had not arrived yet. Meanwhile, residents of the affected areas, irked by the long power outages, have held several demonstrations and sit-ins, but their protests have gone unheeded thus far.

For his part, the sub-divisional officer for old Sukkur, Israr Bajkani, told The Express Tribune that the heavy transformer was the responsibility of the senior officials of the power utility. Bajkani alleged that power theft had become rampant and when their teams raided different areas to remove the illegal connections, the people started protesting.

On the other hand, a senior official in the Sukkur Electric Power Company (Sepco) criticised the poor performance of the officials in the utility, blaming their apathetic attitudes and incompetence for the worsening power crisis. "Another major factor is the politically-motivated postings and transfers of officials who take no interest in their jobs."

Sepco Sukkur CEO Farmanullah Khan said that load-shedding was being carried out in various areas in accordance with the percentage of line losses. "Areas that register higher line losses will have to face more load-shedding," he explained, adding that the faulty transformer will be up and running soon.
