hire live-in drivers, and those who cannot afford the $300 to $400 a month for a driver must rely on male relatives to drive them to work, school, shopping or the doctor. Al-Sherif was initially detained for several hours on Saturday by the country's religious police and released after she signed a pledge agreeing not to drive.

She was re-arrested on Sunday at dawn, said a security official who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak to the media.

Al-Sherif faces accusations of "violating the rules and the system by driving her car, roaming the streets of the province," Khobar prison chief Ayoub ben Nahit was quoted as saying in the daily Al-Watan. He also accused her of "inciting public opinion" by posting the video clip.

Gambian court jails ex-army, navy chiefs

BANJUL: A court in Gambia imposed 20 year jail sentences on Monday on the country's former army and navy chiefs after they were convicted of being involved in a foiled 2006 coup attempt.

The case highlights constant security fears in the tiny West African nation.

Admiral Sarjo Fofana, the former head of the navy, was jailed alongside ex-army chief General Langtombong Tamba, who has already been sentenced to death for involvement in a 2009 coup attempt. The pair were convicted by Gambia's Special Criminal Court on a number of charges relating to treason.
